Stop-Gap Measure Passed

Funds Provided In Emergency To Carry-on Until Aug. 31

WASHINGTON, July 30-(AP)—Congress adopted today an emergency resolution to finance government operations until Aug. 31. It hopes, meantime to pass regular appropriations bills.

The stop-gap resolution was approved by voice vote, first in the House and then in the Senate.

None of the regular appropriation bills financing the government for the year that started July 1 has cleared Congress. All the agencies were financed during Inquiry Start July by an emergency measure expiring tomorrow midnight.

The flood control plan for Kansas and the Missouri river drainage area of Missouri is shown on this map-30 reservoirs and 14 local protection levee projects. The army engineers and Bureau of Reclamation dams in the Pick-Sloan program include 13 on the Kaw river system - two on the Smoky Hill river, one on the Saline, three on the Solomon, five on the Republican, one on the Big Blue and one on the Delaware. There are five dams in Kansas and four in2Missouri on the Marais des Cygnes-Osage river, a tributary of the Missouri river, and four each on the Neosho and Verdigris, which flow south into the Arkansas river. Only three of the dams shown have been completed in Kansas-Kanopolis and Cedar Bluff on the Smoky Hill and Fall river in Nebraska, two dams are complete - Medicine Creek and Enders-and two under construction-Harlan county and Trenton. One completed and two proposed dams on upper reaches of the Republican in Eastern Colorado are not shown. Names of cities underlined indicate where levee and floodwall works are under way or proposed. A reservoir plan for the Grand river in Northwest Missouri is being worked out by federal and state agencies. Current cost estimates for the Kaw river reservoirs is $330,309,300; for the Marais des Cygnes-Osage dams, $177,759,000, and for the Neosho and Verdigris projects, $96,512,500. (AP Map)

Back to Proper Production Aim in Disaster Areas

Federal and State agricultural agencies and farm organizations are cooperating through the Missouri Agricultural Mobilization committee in an extensive drive to help rehabilitate farms and farm people in the State's disaster area, Hilton L. Bracey, chairman of the committee, said today after a week-end meeting with officials in Kansas City.

Agricultural leaders from the four flood-stricken states-Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Missourimet withr Raymond Foley, Housing and Home Finance administrator, who has been designated by President Truman to coordinate all activities of Federal agencies in the flood relief program. According to Bracey, administrator Foley pledged his wholehearted support and the facilities of all agencies to the tremendous job of restoring the area to normalcy.

Bracey and Don E. Smith of the CCC Area office in Kansas City also met with Governor Forrest Smith Saturday and further outlined the objectives of the Department of Agriculture in bringing relief to the disaster area. Back to Production

One of the important phases in this campaign, Bracey said, is the Agricultural Conservation Program that is specifically designed to put farms back into production. High priority is being given to practices such as cleaning drainage ditches, deep plowing, land leveling, reseeding destroyed pasture sods, seeding small grains for fall pasture and winter cover crop, rebuilding erosion control structures and farm fences, and clean tillage to eradicate noxious weeds and grasses. Former film star Virginia Bruce and her Turkish husband, Ali Ipar, have been divorced in legal move to permit him to become a Turkish army officer. They are shown with her son, Chris, as they sailed last year for European vacation. The couple indicated they will be remarried as soon as four-year-old law forbidding commissioning in Turkey's armed forces men married to foreigners, is repealed as expected. Ipar, member of one of Turkey's richest families, has moved into town house in Istanbul, while Virginia and her two children by previous marriage are living with Ipar's family. (AP WIREPHOTO)
